Agency History

Starting in 1896 after the discovery of X-Ray Photography, MGH Hospital was quick to use X- Rays. The first Roentgenologist was MGH photographer Walter Dodd. Gradually the MGH Hospital would develop the first radiology residency program in 1915, started by Dodd's successor George Holmes and in 1925 the first Tumor Board. Over the years the department would develop and grow and has become a leader within the Radiology Field. Still currently functioning with the MGH Hospital, the department continues to grow over the years with the changing technologies.

Series Descriptions

Series I. Administrative Files, 1895-2006

These files reflect the administrative activity of the radiology department between 1895 and 2000. Included within the collection is Radiology Department Staff List, the Cambridge College graduate program that worked with Health Care Management and the history of the department since its inception in 1895.

Series II. Vertical Files, 1900 - 2000

Within this series are a collection of personnel files of multiple staff members who were involved within the Radiology department. The staff files range in years from the early 1900's to the 2000's.

Series III. Linton, Otha : Research, 1938 – 2000

An extensive collection of information files, first hand accounts and articles about the inception and evolution of the radiology department at MGH hospital. Includes contributions from MGH Radiology members as well as members of the radiology field. Possibly used for his book titled Radiology at Massachusetts General Hospital 1896-2000.

Series IV. Information Files, 1913 – 2000

The series consists of a collection of journal articles as well as newspaper articles authored by multiple scholars in which pertain to the growth and changes within the radiology field.

Series V. Photographs, 1851 – 2000

Included within the series is an extensive collection of staff, historical and unknown photographs. Additionally is a large collection of files pertaining to the creation of various radiology departments within the area.
